Oil Slips From 7-Yr High with Key US Storage Hub in Focus

Blomberg

Oil and oil futures fell on Tuesday as investors weighed the impact of a report from the Energy Information Administration (EIA) showing that US oil storage capacity is nearly full. The report also showed that US oil production is at a record high, which could lead to a surplus of oil in the market.

The report showed that US oil storage capacity is at 1.2 billion barrels, which is nearly full. This is a concern for investors because it suggests that there is a surplus of oil in the market, which could lead to a decline in oil prices.

The report also showed that US oil production is at a record high of 10.1 million barrels per day. This is a concern for investors because it suggests that there is a surplus of oil in the market, which could lead to a decline in oil prices.

Sensex Extends Losses into 3rd Day, Loses 336 Pts

The Sensex index fell by 336 points on Tuesday, ending the day at 18,200. This marks the third consecutive day of losses for the index. The Nifty 50 index also fell by 48 points, ending the day at 5,415.15.

The decline in the indices is attributed to a combination of factors, including a decline in global equity markets and a focus on US oil storage capacity. Investors are also concerned about the high market capitalization to GDP ratio.

Gold Buckles Under Higher US Treasury Yields

Gold prices fell on Tuesday as investors weighed the impact of a report from the US Treasury Department showing that the US government is planning to raise its debt ceiling. The report also showed that the US government is planning to increase its spending, which could lead to higher inflation.

The report showed that the US government is planning to raise its debt ceiling to $31.4 trillion. This is a concern for investors because it suggests that the US government is running a large deficit, which could lead to higher inflation.

The report also showed that the US government is planning to increase its spending by $1.5 trillion over the next five years. This is a concern for investors because it suggests that the US government is running a large deficit, which could lead to higher inflation.
