Amsterdam to Ban Cruise Ships to Control Tourism, Pollution

Amsterdam: Amsterdam voted to ban cruise ships in an effort to curb back on the inflow of tourists and reduce pollution from the giant vessels.

The Dutch capital's council voted on Thursday to restrict the jumbo ships from docking in the city and aims to close its central cruise-ship terminal, according to a municipal spokesperson.

The timeline and details of implementation will be decided after consultations with various stakeholders, the spokesperson said. "The polluting cruise is not in line with Amsterdam's sustainable ambitions," said Ilana Rodheker, the local leader of the socially progressive D66 party, which introduced the motion.

28% GST Levy: Online Gaming Investors Write to PM

MOST ONEROUS TAX REGIME Say 28% GST levy on full face value of may lead to write-off of $2.5 b investments and loss of 50k high-skilled jobs

Bengaluru: The proposed 28% GST on the full face value of online gaming transactions "will lead to a potential write-off of the $2.5 billion capital invested in this sector," 30 Indian and foreign investors have said in a letter to Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The investors have sought a meeting with Modi or officials at the Prime Minister's Office to elaborate their concerns.

They said the current proposal "will set up the most onerous tax regime for the gaming sector globally."

"We submit most humbly that this deleterious impact on the industry is expected to result in loss of over 30,000 high-skilled jobs and a further loss of livelihood opportunity for over one million Indian citizens who are indirectly associated with this industry," the joint letter said.

They also put forth global examples of countries such as the UK, US and France to suggest how the levy on the full face value based on "destruction of the sector", including several startups.

Investors that have signed the joint letter to the prime minister include Peak XV Partners (formerly Sequoia Capital India), Tiger Global Management, DST Global, Clrys Capital, Kalasari Capital and Alpha Wave Global, Bennett, Coleman & Company Ltd, which publishes ET is also a signatory to the letter.

The GST Council, comprising the Centre and all the states, had earlier this month recommended a 28% GST on the full face value of money invested on online gaming, esports and horse-racing bets. This means the tax will be imposed on the entire deposit made by the user to enter on each contest. There is a separate tax on the winnings of users.

ET had reported exclusively that online gaming investors were planning to write to the government, flagging their concerns over the GST Council's decision.

Last week, ET reported that around 100 online gaming companies and industry associations, including Mobile Premier League (MPL), Nazara Technologies, Gamkraft Technologies and Winzo Games, had jointly appealed for reconsideration of the recommendation.

The government, however, dismissed the need for any consultations with the industry on the matter, saying the decision at the GST Council to impose 28% tax was "unanimous" and that an early review was unlikely.

In the latest letter, investors also pointed out that the decision has an "unintended consequence of equating the constitutionally protected legitimate online skill gaming industry with gambling, betting and other games of chance."

"Increase in the rate from the current 18% to 28% on the operator's gaming revenue would have led to a 50% increase in GST collection for the exchequer from this sector without adversely impacting the sector," the letter said.

The investors also put forth three different scenarios of the ways GST may be implemented on the sector. As per the worst scenario, "the GST burden will increase by 1,100% and on account of taxation of redeployed player winnings, the same may not get taxed repeatedly."

Amazon, Google, Meta, 4 Others Agree to AI Safeguards Set by the White House

Washington: Amazon, Google, Meta, Microsoft and other companies that are leading the development of artificial intelligence technology have agreed to meet a set of AI safeguards brokered by President Joe Biden's administration. The White House said Friday that it has secured voluntary commitments from seven US companies meant to ensure their AI products are safe before they release them. Some of the commitments call for third-party oversight of the workings of commercial AI systems, though they don't detail who will audit the technology or hold the companies accountable.

A surge of commercial investment in generative AI tools that can write convincingly human-like text and churn out new images and other media has brought public fascination as well as concern about their ability to trick people and spread disinformation, among other dangers.

The four tech giants, along with ChatGPT maker OpenAI and startups Anthropic and Inflection, have committed to security testing "carried out in part by independent experts" to guard against major risks, such as biosecurity and cybersecurity, the White House said in a statement.

The companies have also committed to methods for reporting vulnerabilities to their systems and to using digital watermarking to help distinguish between real and AI-generated images known as deepfakes.

They will also publicly report flaws and risks in their technology, including effects on fairness and bias, the White House said.

The voluntary commitments are meant to be an immediate way of addressing risks ahead of major attempts to get Congress to pass laws regulating the technology.

Some advocates for AI regulations said Biden's move is a start but more needs to be done to hold the companies and their products accountable.

"History would indicate that many tech companies don't actually walk the talk on a voluntary pledge to act responsibly" and support strong regulations," said a statement from James Shryver, founder and CEO of the nonprofit Common Sense Media. Senator Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., has said he will introduce legislation to regulate AI. He has held a number of briefings with government officials to educate senators about an issue that has become a bipartisan interest. — AP
